SCHOOL PROJECTS FOR 1930

"BE KIND TO ANIMALS WEEK" PLAY

April 21 to 27

EXCERPTS from "VIRGINIA'S DREAM," a Play for Grade Schools

Music by Florence Chambers, internationally known Composer and Pianist. Book by Dolores Wilkens Kent Dramatized from story of Mrs. E. M. S. Fire, in K. D. M., No. 21.

Costume Designs by Myrtle Wright

A prologue follows the melodious overture. Curtain rises on Virginia's bedroom. She has just retired and her mother is still tucking in the covers. Cat is curled up asleep at foot of bed.

Virginia

You promised me this morning, mother dear,
A story when the day was done.
And now 'tis over and my prayers are said.
It is such fun to lie here safely tucked in bed.
Pussy, too, is listening, waiting for a tale from you.

Mother

Mother sits in chair beside bed. Tells the legend of St. Francis and the Wolf.

A story, let me see, I've told so many,
Little daughter.
It is hard to think of something new.
But here is one, so old it will be new again.
About St. Francis who lived in Assisi, in Italy,
Some centuries ago... He had such great love within his heart
For man and bird and beast,
His name goes on an ever living thing...
Once there was a wolf so wild and fierce
That he caused great trouble in the country
Where he lived...
One day St. Francis went to meet the wolf...
St. Francis said, "Brother Wolf, in God's name
I command you that you do not harm me nor anybody."

And from that day he like a great dog followed
Brother Francis close at heel.
He taught the little children not to fear him...
When in course of time the wolf died the children Wept for their old friend.
So love brings love, you see, and casts out fear...

Mother puts out lights and opens window, the moon-light streaming through it, bids Virginia good-night and leaves room.

Virginia

Virginia sits up in bed, addresses cat
Pussy, did you hear about that wolf?
I wouldn't fear him either.
Oh, I wish that I had lived long, long ago
In Italy,
And known the wolf and that good saint
Of Assisi.
Voice dies away—she lies back upon pillows and sleeps. Room darkens for a second, then moon-light again showing, reveals a dainty little fairy, who waves a silver wand at Virginia, saying:

Fairy

Moon-light shining silver bright.
Carries far your wish tonight.
In a dream 'twill granted be.

And St. Francis you will see.

Mother...

Curtain

End of Prologue.

INTERLUDE

Between Prologue and First Act.

Scene

Meadow.—moon slowly rising. Music of Moon-Beam Chorus plays softly, as, through trees at back, the children dressed as moon-beams steal to form in dance rank on stage. When complete number are assembled the music rises to full and they dance—

Moon-beam Chorus

Moon-beams are dancing
Gaily tonight,
Gilding and glinting
In streamers of light.

Over the sleeping
World in a dream,
Weaving together
Things as they seem.

Say who can tell us
Which is most true,
Stories of dream-land,
Or day-light and you.

End of Interlude—Curtain

ACT I—SCENE I

Street in the Land of Dreams

Enter Virginia and Pussy.

Virginia

Where are we, Pussy? Oh, see, a dog.

Pussy, who are we?

No, Pussy, I am a dog.

The friend of man am I, so meet you
At the portals of the Land of Dreams.

St. Francis enters. He greets Virginia and then the Wolf comes. Virginia begs to meet him. St. Francis speaks to Wolf.
ST. FRANCIS
The earnest wish of this small maid
Has brought her into Dreamland, unafraid.
Tell your story so that she may understand
The bitter hardship of the wild folk land.

THE WOLF
Dear master, ere you came naught did I know
Of kindness.
When but a cub men killed my mother and I saw her die.
That ended all the good in me.
I nearly starved but managed to struggle on,
Until at last I grew, the hand of all against me.
Out-lawed, hunted, so I struck back,
And bared my fangs in glee to see the fear men had of me.
Then you came with pity, love, compassion in your eyes and voice.
You called me “Brother” I who had ever lived alone.
You made me understand the kinship
Of God’s whole creation.

VIRGINIA
Dear Wolf, let us be friends.
This dreaming is so wonderful
I hope it never ends.

Enter Deer (to St. Francis):

DEER
Hark, St. Francis to my prayer,
One I love is in distress.
Weary, old and heartsticken, too,
Weeping tears of loneliness.
Often she has sheltered us
In her tiny cabin home.
Many deeds of kindness
To the forest folk has shown.
Dear St. Francis, hear my prayer,
Come and banish her despair.

ST. FRANCIS
Gladly we will comfort bring
To one who seems well worth
The comforting.
Together let us follow, lead the way.
They go off stage, Deer leading, St. Francis and Virginia earnestly talking; then the Dog and Wolf.
The Cat, seeing that she is the last, instantly pushes in ahead of the latter, saying haughtily:
Pray pardon me, but I am a guest
So take precedence o’er the rest.

End of Scene 1—Curtain

ACT I—SCENE 1
Meadow on way to cabin, trees at back, St. Francis, Virginia and animals come on in order of exit in last scene, Cat still proudly walking ahead of Dog. Music plays St. Francis Chorus. Animals and birds steal from trees and beckon to others until full chorus is assembled. They then sing and dance. Principals grouped in center.

CHORUS OF ST. FRANCIS
Dear St. Francis of Assisi,
Trusting love we give to thee,
Food and shelter always sharing
With all creatures thou dost see.
Brother Francis of Assisi,
In our hearts we ever hold,
Aiding us in health or sickness,
When the winter winds are cold.
Dear St. Francis of Assisi,
Idolized by bird and beast.
Sing we now our thanks and praises
From the greatest to the least.
Chorus dances off singing.
Principals walk off in same order as they entered.
End of Act 1—Curtain

ACT II
Curtain rises in outskirts of woods, little old woman seated at door of tiny cabin. She is crying.
Enter St. Francis, Virginia, Dog, Wolf and Cat in order of last scene. Deer runs ahead to old woman.

DEER
Kind mistress, do not be dismayed.
St. Francis comes himself to give you aid.
ST. FRANCIS
Good mother, this your sorrow pray relate.
A burden shared is only half as great.
OLD WOMAN
. . . My heart is comfortless and cold,
I am forgotten both by kin and friends.
’Tis hard St. Francis to grow old.
ST. FRANCIS
Not alone, for this fine deer had thought of you
And brought us to your side.
But who are these I see approaching
Through the trees?
One by one the Rabbit, Quail, Squirrel, Crow, Fox, Dove, Bear and Meadow-lark enter, tell the story of the kind deeds that the Old Woman did for them, then retire to sides of stage.

ST. FRANCIS
See, mother, your kind deeds as flower-fairies come.
Music plays Kind-Deeds Fairies Chorus as they dance on. They sing as they go through lovely flower ballet.

KIND DEEDS FAIRIES CHORUS
We are kind-deeds fairies,
Such a happy band,
Wearing pretty flowers,
Here in Dreamy Land.

Every deed of kindness
Any mortals do,
Adds another fairy,
And a flower, too.

Dancing in the moon-light,
Sleeping all the day,
Joyous little fairies
Sing their songs away.

Then they mix with birds and beasts at side and back of stage, leaving the principals in the center front.

OLD WOMAN
How could I know they would remember me?
When my own flesh and blood forget—
ST. FRANCIS
A kindness done to animals will never be forgotten.
The dog dies broken-hearted on his master’s grave.
So will these loyal friends be true . .
Your kind deeds like seedlings planted long ago,

THE KIND DEEDS CLUBS

Through a lack of space we are deprived of the pleasure of giving a report of the work which has been achieved by the KIND DEEDS CLUBS in Alameda County during the first semester. It has surpassed in volume and interest all former records. In our February number special space will be devoted to this subject. Gratifying beyond all former experience has been the zeal of our school children who led by their teachers have combined to make happy during the holiday season homes other than their own.

We wish to express to teachers and pupils the joy that their work has brought to our office, and to wish them all a New Year brimming over with happiness.
